FROM THE PUBLISHER

This month we head to Las Vegas for the 2007 Global Gaming Expo held November 13-15 at the Las Vegas Convention Center. Frank Fahrenkopf gives readers the inside scoop on what the 750-plus exhibitors and thousands of attendees will find on the show floor and the new technologies that will be demonstrated. He also discusses the exciting educational opportunities for attendees at the show's break-out sessions and panel discussions.

This month's feature article highlights the latest products the game manufacturers will be demonstrating at this year's show. This issue also features expanded New Games and Product Spotlight sections with details and booth numbers for the latest games and products being exhibited at the show. You can also flip to our advertiser's index at the back of the magazine to find vendor booth numbers so you can easily locate them on the show floor.

The National Indian Gaming Association recently circulated a letter regarding the NIGC's announcement that they will soon be publishing proposed Class II Technical Standards and Minimal Internal Control Standards. The NIGC is also considering publishing a proposed change to the definition of electronic facsimile as well as to the classification standards. In his regulatory update, Knute Knudson of IGT disusses this important issue, including the significant role Class II gaming plays in the economic viability of tribes and how essential it is that everyone voice their opinion before any final decisions are made.

Indian Gaming magazine will be in booth #521 at G2E this year, located near the entrance. If you're able to attend the show, I would like to invite you to stop by our booth and say hello. We enjoy receiving feedback from our readers and are always interested in any insights or article ideas you have. I look forward to seeing you at the show!
